

Greenbelt Plans Its Traditional July 4 Celebrations at the Lake

by Randy Chow and Matthew Neus

Community members enjoy the fireworks display at Greenbelt Lake in 2016.

The City of Greenbelt will celebrate Independence Day with fireworks over Greenbelt Lake on Thursday, July 4, as it did for the City's first such celebration.

This July 4, Greenbelters can enjoy crafts from 4 to 6 p.m. at Buddy Attick Park. From 5:30 p.m. to 6:45 p.m. a drum circle will take place at the bandstand, See JULY 4, page 7

New GAC Stage Makes Actor's Dreams of Performing Possible

by Matthew Neus

When Mahalia attended her first play at the Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC), she envisioned herself on the stage reciting lines and acting out a scene. But there was a problem. The center, including the stage, was not accessible for actors in wheelchairs – like Greenbelter Mahalia.

She expressed interest in participating in Camp Encore two years ago. The three-week-long camp allows students to audition and play a role in a production. Last year, when Mahalia first participated in the camp she was able to do so because it was held at the Community Center instead of at GAC, its usual venue.

GAC's stage is surrounded by chairs on three sides for patrons to sit and watch performances. To the right of the stage is the dressing room and beyond that is the green room, a place where actors convene before shows. For Mahalia, it wasn't always possible for her to join her fellow actors in the dressing room. To get there, actors and crew members needed to climb stairs. That made it difficult for Mahalia to participate fully in the production.

Kate Magill Robinson, who has directed the camp's productions for 11 years, sought to make Mahalia's aspirations of performing in a play at the GAC a reality.

Robinson said she joined the GAC board two years ago with the thought of making the stage accessible a main priority. Her first goal was to acquire an evacuation chair for use in case of emergency. With money from the Non-profit Recovery Grant Funds awarded to the GAC by the city, she made the purchase as the center's first step toward becoming accessible.

She said the chair was used for the first time during a practice fire drill, and it made the process much simpler for an evacuation. The next step was to place ramps for actors and crew members to pass from the green room to the dressing room and to the stage.

Council Receives Reparations Reports, Discusses JEDI Audit

by Maurice Crawford

On Wednesday evening, June 5, the Greenbelt City Council heard reports from Tribesby regarding Phase II of the Justice, Equity, Diversity and Inclusion (JEDI) audit and from the Reparations Commission.

Part of this worksession was aimed at hearing from the Greenbelt Reparations Commission regarding its second report to council and how council may facilitate its work. It had been about 15 months since council last met with the group. At this meeting the commission was represented by Lorena Ferguson, Mark Miller, Denise Nadasen and Lois Rosado. This commission was established in 2022 to review, discuss and make recommendations related to local reparations for African American and Native American residents of Greenbelt. Although the initial instructions to the commission were vague, the commission has made strides in developing a governance structure for its work, establishing committees and laying a path forward.

Planning

Members of the commission held a retreat in March to identify goals and ways to achieve those goals. During the retreat the commission created a Strategic Planning Work group. This group will develop a working definition of terms, determine the scope for a historic data collection time frame, set a time frame for the completion of work, identify demographics/populations (stakeholders), and create and distribute a survey to measure community members' knowledge and attitudes on reparations and governance.

It also set up three new subcommittees: 1) The Historical Research Subcommittee (HR) will conduct research on the harms caused to African Americans and Indigenous People on Greenbelt land; 2) The Reparations Policy Research Subcommittee will explore how other localities approach reparations; and 3) The Community Education and Engagement Subcommittee will identify and interview impacted community members to learn about their perspectives on systemic harm and current experiences. This subcommittee will also educate the community about the history of Greenbelt and share updates on the progress.

In general, members of the commission feel they are making progress and have a 500-page document of historical facts that needs to be explored in order to create recommendations. They believe that for the commission to be successful they will need paid staff and financial resources. The commission is also missing representation from Native American people. This effort is too onerous to be successfully completed by an all-volunteer

The Bikeriders

The film captures a rebellious time in America when the culture and people were changing. After a chance encounter at a local bar, strong-willed Kathy (Jodie Comer) is inextricably drawn to Benny (Austin Butler), the newest member of Midwestern motorcycle club the Vandals led by the enigmatic Johnny (Tom Hardy). Much like the country around it, the club begins to evolve, transforming from a gathering place for local outsiders into a dangerous underworld of violence, forcing Benny to choose between Kathy and his loyalty to the club.

Thelma

Inspired by a real-life experience of director Josh Margolin’s own grandmother, the film puts a clever spin on movies like Mission Impossible, shining the spotlight on an elderly grandmother as an unlikely action hero. With infectious humor, Margolin employs the familiar tropes of the action genre in hilarious, age-appropriate ways to tackle aging with agency. In the first leading film role of her 70-year career, June Squibb portrays the strong-willed Thelma with grit and determination, demonstrating that she is more than capable of taking care of business – despite what her daughter Gail (Parker Posey), son-in-law Alan (Clark Gregg) or grandson Danny (Fred Hechinger) might believe. Says critic Candice McMillan of Seattle Refined, “There is no Thelma without June Squibb, and it is impossible not to fall in love with both.”

Blazing Saddles

In this satirical take on Westerns, crafty railroad worker Bart (Cleavon Little) becomes the first black sheriff of Rock Ridge, a frontier town about to be destroyed in order to make way for a new railroad. Initially, the people of Rock Ridge harbor a racial bias toward their new leader. However, they warm to him after realizing that Bart and his perpetually drunk gunfighter friend (Gene Wilder) are the only defense against a wave of thugs sent to rid the town of its population.

Big Hero 6

In this animated feature, robotics prodigy Hiro (Ryan Potter) lives in the city of San Fransokyo. Next to his older brother, Tadashi, Hiro’s closest companion is Baymax (Scott Adsit), a robot whose sole purpose is to take care of people. When a devastating turn of events throws Hiro into the middle of a dangerous plot, he transforms Baymax and his other friends, Go Go Tamago (Jamie Chung), Wasabi (Damon Wayans Jr.), Honey Lemon (Genesis Rodriguez) and Fred (T.J. Miller) into a band of high-tech heroes.

Find More Peace Through Meditation

In today's world, many people have trouble falling asleep and feel stress or anxiety. Could meditation help them?

Katrina Boverman, a longtime meditation instructor with the Seasoned Adults Growing Educationally (SAGE) program, and the Mishkan Torah Synagogue Sisterhood have quietly offered Summer Guided Meditation classes to Greenbelters and others for the past nine years. Although the synagogue itself is a wonderful peaceful setting welcoming to all, meditation this year will be offered via Zoom to attend from the comfort of your own home.

Attendees have expressed quieting of their bodies, minds and spirits, a deepening of inner stillness and a better ability to reconnect with themselves. They have described feeling more peaceful, serene, relaxed, mindful and present, both during and in between the classes. Common experiences outside of the class for participants have been to have greater ease falling asleep and more patience during challenging times.

Classes began Monday, June 3 and are held every other Monday through August 26, from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. There is no charge; donations are welcome.

For more information email or call Katrinaboverman@yahoo.com or 301-641-1035.

Who Should Be Greenbelt’s 2024 Outstanding Citizen?

by Tom Jones

It’s the peak of summer, but Greenbelt’s Labor Day Festival arrives in just nine weeks. Since 1973, the Festival includes a special Greenbelt tradition: designating the year’s Outstanding Citizen. Every year, Greenbelt celebrates one of its most generous volunteers at the Labor Day Festival, on a permanent plaque in the Community Center and as Labor Day Parade Grand Marshal.

The Outstanding Citizen Committee needs you to help identify someone deserving this honor. Nominees must be volunteers; elected officials and paid employees are not eligible. If you know someone whose efforts stand out in one or more community organizations, who shows concern for others and who demonstrates cooperation, enthusiasm and leadership, now is the time to send your nomination. A nomination form is provided in this paper on page 9, although you’re also welcome to submit a letter. Nominations may be submitted until Monday, July 29 by mail to Bob Zugby, Outstanding Citizen Committee, 94 Ridge Road, Greenbelt MD 20770, or by email to OutstandingCitizenGB@gmail.com.

Last year’s Outstanding Citizen is Linda Ivy, who has led the Labor Day Festival for 16 years including during the challenging pandemic, as well as numerous other volunteering and community activities. Prior Outstanding Citizens have been involved in a wide variety of volunteer work, including supporting scouting, sports and senior citizen programs. Most importantly, Outstanding Citizens make Greenbelt a better place. This is the time to recognize their contributions.

The Outstanding Citizen for 2024 will be announced during a Friday evening ceremony at the start of the Labor Day Festival. Local businesses have already set aside prizes for the winner, and local officials are ready to proclaim the accomplishments of one of our neighbors.

If you’ve nominated someone who was not chosen in a prior year, don’t be discouraged – please try again. You may wish to include a deeper description of your nominee’s volunteer experience or letters of support from more people. The committee receives many excellent nominations each year but must choose only one recipient. Submit your nomination now to ensure they’re considered for this important community tradition.

Volunteers Needed

The Greenbelt MakerSpace seeks volunteers to staff the tool library and organize classes and other events. People are asking for more open hours. Help is needed for the tool library to expand. Sign up for shifts at signup.com/go/UNkLnqk or email us at staff@make125.org if interested in other times or jobs.

Sankofa

Rev. Ann Kadlecek with Worship Associate Jacqui Walpole

The word “Sankofa” refers to bringing what is good from the past into the present and future – it is an act of looking both at where we’ve been and where we’re going. Today, as we say farewell to our current minister and prepare for our new minister, we’ll engage in this practice together.

This service will begin earlier than usual, at 2:30, and will be followed at 3:15 by a celebration of our three year shared developmental ministry.

Meet me at the Greenbelt Animal Shelter, Saturdays, 11 am - 3 pm!*

Hi. I'm Beethoven, and like the great musician, I'm deaf and quite the prodigy. I already know a few hand signs, like sit and shake, and I'm eager to learn more along with you! I also excel at independent play. I especially like tossing rope toys around the yard and chasing balls through tunnels. When kicking back, I enjoy cuddling with big stuffy toys, which I often use as pillows.

Some friends say I'm gentle on leash walks, but others say I can use some more training, so I'm looking for a patient adopter who will help me improve. Do you have experience living with a deaf dog? Or are you willing to learn as we become life-long besties? If so, let's do it!

when the teens of Greenbelt Recreation’s Camp Encore couldn’t find a flower bouquet at the Co-op. They decided that a pineapple was close enough.

“I thought you might be interested in those,” Kate says, watching me explore a deck of colorful playing cards on the coffee table. The front of the pack reads, Zounds! A Shakespearean Card Game – and, yes, I started playing with it as soon as I sat down. On the living room wall hangs a photograph of Kate and her husband, Mark, at their wedding. The young-and-in-love couple stands on a lawn in a pale gazebo painted blue and white. “Mark built that,” she tells me, as part of the set of their company’s production of Much Ado About Nothing. Mark proposed to Kate onstage one night after a 60s-themed Hansel and Gretel. She holds the photo out to me, in which Mark is on one knee in front of a thoroughly shocked Kate in a big 1960s skirt.

Kate has been acting and directing Shakespeare for decades now, but “hated it growing up” – because the Bard was taught in English classes, framed as literature instead of as theater. But putting on Merry Wives of Windsor the summer after her first year of college gave her a new perspective and she continued acting in summer Shakespeare shows until she graduated. Her interest in Shakespeare developed further while she wrote study guides and researched the plays’ history for her classes. “I just like learning things,” she says simply.

For her teen homeschool class, held in the Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC), Kate adopts a fairly hands-off approach to directing. She stays seated, her eyes following the high schoolers’ progress behind her glasses. She notices my confusion upon seeing the set laid out for one of the short plays, about two would-be lovers in a café. The set is composed of two tables and four chairs despite the fact that, in the original show, there are only two characters. Kate tilts her head backward over her chair to look at me and explains, “I Kate-d it,” meaning that she divided the lines between two sets of actors. This kills two birds with one stone by making memorization easier and allowing room for multiple actors to share the spotlight. At one point, Kate’s daughter, Aria, joins her onstage to ask for help finding something.

“Hey, peach fuzz,” Kate murmurs, kissing the top of the little blond head.

Kate Magill Robinson is a theater director, drama instructor and a member of the board of Greenbelt Arts Center.

Kate has always liked working with children. As a college student she pursued a degree in education, but the inflexible process grated on her. “My professor was explaining that ‘this is how you deal with the autistic kids’... I knew damn well that what works for this autistic kid isn’t going to work for this one.” She describes her frustration arguing with the professor during class, unable to alter his insistence on a uniform approach to handling students’ differences. Fed up, she dropped her education major and graduated from Shippensburg with a bachelor’s degree in interdisciplinary arts, which she readily declares is “a made-up degree.”

It may be just as well that Kate didn’t bother with the inflexible classes required for an education major; experience has instructed her far better than any teacher. She hasn’t yet grown too serious to engage with her kids as kids, indulging in such antics as standing behind one of the GAC poles and waving her arms in an imitation of an alien (so they have something to invoke for the alien-summoning warm-up, you understand). She is evidently long past alarm about more harmless shenanigans, and she stays remarkably composed throughout the work day; she leans over to make a note while three of the older actors wrestle for a script, and doesn’t even flinch when a pen is accidentally flung at her.

Ultimately, what brought Kate back to education after college was children. “I realized I could effect change,” she tells me. This, she explains, is her contribution to her students’ lives and futures, even though “I know I’m not saving the world.”

Maybe not, but word about Kate has spread among parents of homeschooled children, as well as among local youth. It’s gotten out that, if you need somewhere to go – if home’s not safe, perhaps, or you need a way to spend your summer vacation – you can find it with Kate and her actors. When it’s mentioned that neurodivergent kids and teens simply flock to her, as if by some shared instinct, she beams.

“I know!” she exclaims. “And I love it!”

Kate has been working to make the GAC more accessible, equipping the space with ramps and the like to improve mobility for actors and patrons. Her next big projects come this summer, when she will be directing Camp Encore through the Community Center and the Teen Summer Shakespeare Intensive production of Romeo and Juliet. She insists that it is not a love story, but “a cautionary tale about what happens when you let hate rule everything.” The cast and crew have been counting down the days until rehearsals begin.

There’s no one, it seems, in whom she doesn’t see potential. “You can always see in a kid that there’s more there,” she asserts.

But first, those kids need to be able to strip off their defenses. Kate is aware that some students join her classes primarily for a safe place, somewhere they feel they can be authentic — and that’s okay too, she promises. “We’ll find a place for you.”

Two ramps were installed to connect all three areas, from being on stage in front of the spotlight to the set behind the curtains. Everyone is now able to get to any place they want to go. It allowed Mahalia to finally experience being an actor at the GAC, something she’s wanted to do since that first play she witnessed.

“It’s helping me, and now I think it’s going to help other people,” Mahalia said. “The ramps that were installed helped me get backstage to other areas that I wouldn’t otherwise be able to reach.”

These new features are part of the center’s effort to be inclusive. The BEE@GAC initiative promotes belonging, equity and expansion for everyone involved at the GAC and in the Greenbelt community.

“We’re not being equitable because we couldn’t have everybody on our stage. Let’s make that happen,” Robinson said. “It was a year of planning and working with different people and making sure we had a good setup and all that.”

The camp now returns to the stage at the GAC after its one-year hiatus during which it was held at the Community Center because of the accessibility challenges.

The campers are currently rehearsing for their production of Italian theater Commedia Dell’arte. Mahalia is playing the role of a soldier, something she’s excited about. The group of actors will perform on July 3.

“Seeing the new improvements for the ramps and stuff, it was really helpful,” she said. “I’m like

An evacuation chair to be used during an emergency

This ramp leads out of the dressing room into the green room, the area where actors wait before shows.

‘Wow, this is really possible.’ And now I’m able to fully experience it with full access.”

Ingrid Watson Hosts Luncheon And Reports to Greenbelt Seniors

by Lois Rosado

There were approximately 45 residents from all areas of Greenbelt, along with members of the city council and state representatives at County Councilmember Ingrid Watson’s senior luncheon on May 31. These luncheons were begun by Ingrid Turner and will continue with her, said Watson. Greenbelt was the second of six senior luncheons she is planning to have throughout District 4.

Budget Update

The county shortfall of $171 million was caused by higher interest rates, which reduced home sales and lowered property tax revenue. The ending of the pandemic federal funds, rising costs, inflation, climate change mitigation and increasing required state funding for education provided additional funding challenges. Watson explained that 62 percent of the county budget is for education, 20 percent is for public safety, while the remaining 18 percent supports county government operations.

The county will continue to spend funds to help in police recruitment. One hundred new police officers and 150 fire fighters have been hired. Given the increased development, especially in the Bowie area, public safety is one of Watson’s priorities.

Watson noted that there is $3 million to help county nonprofits through grants and $100,000 to help support animal services that have been severely underfunded and understaffed. She is trying to obtain more funding for the North County Animal Shelter with assistance from U.S. Representative Glenn Ivey.

About $250,000 will be used to fund a sickle cell machine at the University of Maryland Capital Region Medical Center. Prince George’s County has 40 percent of the 5,000 sickle cell patients in Maryland.

The Climate Action Plan through the county Department of the Environment is funded for $55.1 million for electric buses, tree planting and technical assistance, another priority for Watson.

There is $108 million for stormwater management. Child Resource Connect will receive $400,000 to assist new families in the county. They will receive a home visit to help them identify available family resources.

Additional items funded were the rehab or replacement of fire stations. Increased staffing for the Health Department continues to be a challenge. Funding will be used for all 20 library branches which are still understaffed. There were funds allocated for roads, parks and trail maintenance, assistance for small businesses, procurements and some grant assistance for nonprofits.

Watson plans to constantly connect with the community and sponsor events for residents and seniors to gather and obtain information. She will continue the HOA roundtables. These meetings will alternate between Greenbelt and Bowie; the last one was in Greenbelt.

Watson has secured funding to support nonprofits that fill in the gaps for education services, family services, scholarships and community-based programs. Special appropriation grants enable Greenbelt nonprofits to be supported through her office.

She described the Pick It Up program as an environmental effort to help bring communities and neighborhoods together to clean up litter and garbage to bond around a community improvement task. They had a great turnout last year and she plans to continue this project, scheduled for September 21. Watson asks the community to identify areas that are challenging so they can be prioritized.

Watson hosted the District 4 Green Hat Summit environmental workshop. These workshops will focus on topics such as the importance of food composting. This first one occurred at the Glenn Dale Fire Station. The next topic will be about recycling.

Upcoming Legislation

Upcoming legislation includes building code and noise mitigation, especially for condos and townhomes, and public safety involving Kias and Hyundais, which seem to be the most stolen cars in this county. Rental housing disclosure to prevent another fiasco like Charlestowne North is in the works. Watson is working with Greenbelt City Manager Josué Salmerón to ensure that property owners are a legitimate company and residents can quickly be informed of new owners.

Legislation will also seek to curb Airbnbs. Leisure places have begun operating in many communities, but no one knows who the owners are or if they are properly licensed to run such facilities and legislation is being developed to address those issues.

followed by a concert band performance at 7:30 p.m. and fireworks at dusk over the Lake (about 9 p.m.).

The Greenbelt Baptist Church is also hosting a Fourth of July picnic across the street from Buddy Attick Park at 4 p.m. Attendees to the admission-free picnic can enjoy food, bounce houses for children, snow cones and water.

Community members can host picnics, enjoy a lakeside walk and the playground.

Last year the crowd was larger than expected due to the cancellation of the neighboring College Park fireworks. This year College Park is again not planning any fireworks display. In Greenbelt, large crowds in similar numbers to previous years are expected. It is preferable for residents to walk to the celebration, but parking is available in the parking lot at Buddy Attick Park and along Crescent Road. Drivers should observe all parking signs in place.

Following the fireworks, traffic from the Buddy Attick Park area will be permitted only in one direction, with both lanes leading vehicles to Kenilworth Avenue. For an estimated 30 to 45 minutes, Greenbelt police will direct traffic at the Crescent-Kenilworth intersection. Traffic from Kenilworth Avenue will not be permitted to turn onto Crescent Road until most cars have left the area after the fireworks show.

Greenbelt police officers will be on foot throughout the park. Outside food and non-alcoholic beverages are permitted. Fireworks – such as firecrackers, snakes, sparklers and bottle rockets – are prohibited by law.

First Celebration

As reported by the Greenbelt Cooperator (the News Review’s original name), Greenbelt held its first Fourth of July celebration in 1938, less than one year after the town was founded.

The initial ceremony was an all-day affair. A bicycle parade at Center School (now the Community Center) kickstarted the event at 10 a.m., followed by tricycle races for younger children. The party then moved to Greenbelt Lake for the remainder of the day. The afternoon was filled with games, demonstrations and music. A water obstacle course that was hailed as “better than a circus” (see the June 29, 1938, Cooperator at greenbeltnewsreview.com/archives/) transitioned into sack and three-legged races. A pie-eating contest for kids led into multiple tug-of-war battles against teams from specific blocks of Greenbelt.

Residents enjoyed ice cream and soft drinks and wore commemorative buttons to remember the joyous occasion. Every resident learned the new Greenbelt song before a huge community fireworks display over the lake concluded the night.

The city has celebrated the national holiday similarly through the years, frequently with parades and sporting events, with the night ending in fireworks over Greenbelt Lake most years, though sometimes at Braden Field. There was no July 4 fireworks display in Greenbelt from 1942 to ’45, during World War II (fireworks resumed over the lake in 1946), nor in 2020, during the height of the Covid pandemic.

COUNCIL continued from page 1

commission hence the commission will develop a budget detailing what they need to complete their mission.

Council’s Reactions

Councilmember Silke Pope regretted the initial lack of instruction from the council while Councilmember Kristen Weaver felt that the group has arrived at a good place and welcomes seeing a budget. Mayor Emmett Jordan pointed out that when the commission was first established, they attempted to identify a Native American person but were unsuccessful and this observation led to a discussion of how to find such a person.

Phase II of JEDI audit

The council learned more about Phase II of the JEDI audit through a presentation by Tribes-y, the consulting firm conducting the audit. The second phase will focus on a community assessment and hopes to garner input from segments of the population not usually asked for their opinion or who do not engage with the city council. (See the presentation via a link from the agenda packet for this worksession, accessed from the Municipal Access TV button at greenbeltmd.gov.)

This second phase has a quantitative survey but also includes holding community dialogues (both in person and online) to capture the experiences of residents and their sense of inclusion and belonging in the community.
Using volunteers, these dialogue sessions will engage city residents and will capture their stories and voices. Tribes-y and city
staff are trying to be innovative in how they identify and reach these unheard members of the community. During this phase there is an opportunity for gathering data that could be useful for the Reparations Commission.
The plan is for the community dialogue sessions to be held in August with a report prepared for council by December.

Council’s Thoughts

Jordan wanted to ensure that there wasn’t overlap between the Reparations Commission and the JEDI audit. He also felt that council prides itself on listening to the community and there is a community survey conducted regularly to gain input from Greenbelt residents. Councilmember Danielle McKinney believes there is some overlap between the commission and the JEDI audit but the goals are different. The commission is exploring what happened in the past and how to right wrongs. The JEDI audit is a wider look at how the city engages with the community but both efforts are equally important.
She felt that the August time frame is good but it could miss those on summer vacations.

Weaver believes that it is taking too long to get the results of the community survey and is hoping that Tribes-y it going out into the community rather than residents coming to them. Tribes-y said one segment of the population they are trying to reach are young people (African, Black American and Latinx). They are seeking to visit restaurants and locations where they can find these residents and using social suggestions from council and audience members on how to reach out to the community.

Former councilmember J Da-would be a worksession with the community around the results of Phase I. She is also concerned with how fine-tuned the second phase will be and how it will be

TGI Fridays and Co-op Caught
In Liquor Board Minors Sting

by Cathie Meetre

In the June 12 hearing session of the Prince George’s County Board of License Commissioners, two Greenbelt businesses were fined for selling alcohol to a minor. TGI Fridays and the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket were both caught in an infraction by a team from the Prince George’s County Police Explorer Program. The team consisted of the lead advisor for the program, Wilma Koslowski, and a “17-year-old female underage operative” who is a member of the Explorer program. The program is described on the county website as an “exciting work-based training program for young men and women who are interested in careers in law enforcement and public safety.”

Co-op Fined

According to the written citation for the Co-op, “The operative purchased a 6-pack of 12-ounce bottles of Samuel Adams Boston Lager and the server checked for ID and made the sale.” Co-op Treasurer Amy Drew, who attended the virtual hearing with Co-op Manager Dan Gillotte, explained that the checker carded both members of the Explorer team and was presented by them with “non-standard IDs” that were perhaps of foreign origin. Presumably, however, it was the younger member who actually paid even though the adult was present, hence the infraction.
Drew commented that the foreign IDs presented by the pair and the presence of two purchasers, one of whom was an adult, may have been confusing for the checker. The License Commissioners noted that the Co-op had been free of any such infractions for at least two years (the last was 10 or more years ago, from well before Gillotte took the helm).
The Co-op was fined $1,500 and ordered to institute alcohol sales training.

Contacted for comment, Gillotte stated, “Immediately upon learning of the operation (April 19) and infraction we started a series of retrainings with all cashiers to clarify proper identification (foreign IDs are NOT permitted, for one). Beyond that we are utilizing our point-of-sale system (POS) to require customers who appear under 30 years of age to have their ID scanned at our system. Only eligible legiti-mate state IDs or driver’s licenses will authorize a sale. This retraining, an added emphasis on ID-ing anyone appearing to be under 30 and utilizing the POS technology will prevent us from having this kind of issue again.”

Fridays Fined

Greenbelt’s TGI Fridays, on Capitol Drive, was also cited.
Their infraction was on Friday, April 19, with the same Explorer team members provoking the incident. The 17-year-old girl sat down at a table and, according to

According to an individual aware of the situation, the underage person sat down and ordered a drink for a parent who was on their way in from the parking lot. The server, aware that the requestor was too young, typed in the order but was intending to wait until the parent arrived to be carded before serving it. The bartender, not knowing the situation, made the drink and dropped it at the table. Fridays has already held training for its employees to avoid any future problems.

under the gun or that their experiences are being questioned and that it takes a lot to speak out about injustice in the workplace. Davis believes that some residents felt that the JEDI Phase I report was too critical of city staff and policies. She was concerned about the terminology used and felt there was something to be gained by clarifying how the data were collected and the terms used in the report. Pope received negative feedback on the language and felt there was a need for a worksession prior to phase II. Jordan suggested that council discuss this more. City Manager Josué Salmerón said, "... If you ask employees how they feel about the workplace you have to be prepared to hear the truth. We asked them [city employees] what their experiences were in the workplace and this is their truth." Finally, resident Bill Orleans believes there is no formal way for a city employee to express a grievance without fear of repercussions. He wished council would take action on this by amending the charter to allow collective bargaining.

Pride Celebrations Continue At the Greenbelt Museum

by Julia Snyder

On the afternoon of Sunday, June 23, the Pride celebrations in Greenbelt continued at the Greenbelt Museum. Visitors could take part in craft making and learn about Queer Youth Assemble, an organization that does organizing and protesting for Queer and Trans youth. Zadyn and Edie, leaders from Queer Youth Assemble (who explained that the organization is not “assembly” but rather the verb “assemble” because that’s what they are doing), were present to talk about their organization and lead visitors in making zines and cards to support Queer youth. The Museum gave out stickers and flags and led visitors in making rainbow chains, both in honor of pride and based on the idea that the original children of Greenbelt, during the Great Depression, would have had to make crafts out of whatever scraps they could find, and may have made things like chains of recycled paper and other odds and ends.

Megan Searing Young, the Museum’s director, explained that they have been collecting history about Pride in Greenbelt for some years, but this was their first official celebration. On their YouTube channel they have an interview with Francis “Frank” DeBernardo, one of the founders of GreenBeLT Pride, a community-recognized organization for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender individuals and their allies in Greenbelt. In his interview, DeBernardo says GreenBeLT Pride was formed in 2005 and their first membership meeting took place in 2006. According to a News Review article from March 2, 2006, their slogan was “you can’t spell Greenbelt without GBLT.”

Asked if any of the founders or significant early Greenbelters were Queer, Searing Young explained that the museum wants to do more research in this area. There is not documentation of early Greenbelters who were Queer, partly because in the 1930s it wasn’t safe for folks to be “out,” nor would they have been allowed to live in Greenbelt at that time. However, it is known that one of the planners of Greenbelt lived with a man through his adult life and in the brochure for his memorial service he and his partner were referred to as “the boys,” as a couple, and were described as doing everything together.

The Museum hopes to make Pride an annual tradition and wants to signal to the community that all are welcome here.

Queer Youth Assemble, which tabled the event, is a completely youth run organization, which was formed in 2021. Zadyn is head of programs and helps youth around the country organize their own Queer Youth Assemble programs and protests. They organized a nationwide march for Queer and Trans youth autonomy last May 31 for Trans Visibility Day as well as a Youth Dissent protest at the Supreme Court. Edie, another organizer, put on their Halloween party last year called Monster Mingle, which will be taking place again this year. Anyone who is 13 to 25 years old can join and volunteer
